Woodland Wonder Tales By Cousin Eleanor

HE first thing that Billy Bright-eyes did after having breakfast was to go over to see Perky, the Long-Tailed Jumping Mouse. Billy Brighteyes had not seen this little friend since the day they went to the circus together and he wondered how Perky was getting on. So he sauntered over to Chippie's burrow, where Perky, the Long-Tailed Jumping Mouse, had been making his home, and found, not Perky, but Chippie, bustling about the place in his usual excited way.

"Well, hello, Chippie, I'm glad to see you again. It's been a long time," said Billy Brighteyes heartily, "almost half a year."

"How do you do. Has it been as long as that?" replied Chippie, bowing coldly.

"Why, Chippie, what's the matter?" asked Billy Brighteyes, very surprised. Then he realized that Perky was nowhere in sight and inquired, "Where is Perky?"

"Where, indeed?" sniffed Chippie, and Billy Brighteyes knew that he had hit upon the key to the trouble. "I don't know where that Long-Tailed Jumping Mouse is and, what's more, I don't care," snapped Chippie.

"The idea of that little nobody coming into my house when I was deep in my winter sleep. Why, he's no better than a thief—he is a thief!" declared Chippie excitedly. "He stole nuts from my stores and when I woke up there was nothing to eat in the place. And to crown it all he made me prisoner. That little scoundrel was too small for me to get through and out into the spring sunshine."

"He had the doorway barricaded so that Willy Weasel could not get through and into your house. Don't forget that, Chippie Chippunk," Billy Brighteyes defended.

"What are you talking about?" Chippie asked.

"I'm talking about the time when Willy Weasel was still wearing his white winter whiskers, when food was scarce in the woodland and even a porcupine dinner would have tasted good to some folk," answered Billy Brighteyes.

"Well, what about that time?" Chippie was interested.

"That was when Perky, the Long-Tailed Jumping Mouse, built up your doorway and kept Willy Weasel from eating both you and him," Billy told him.

"What?" exclaimed Chippie. "Do you mean to say that that little long-tailed, long-legged mouse has saved my life?"

"That is exactly what I mean to say," answered Billy Brighteyes. "Gracious me! Gracious me! This is terrible," worried Chippie. "And to think that I turned him away only yesterday," he grieved. "Why didn't you tell me sooner, Billy Brighteyes? It's not fair to have let me know about these things."

"Oh, don't fret so, old thing," said Billy Brighteyes. "We'll go make it all right. We'll go together to see Perky and explain things. He'll understand."

"But where will we find him?" Chippie wanted to know.

"Didn't he say where he was going?" asked Billy Brighteyes. "The truth is, I didn't give him a chance," Chippie confessed. "Oh, Billy Brighteyes, I'm sorry, so sorry."

"That's all right, I tell you. Buck up and we'll find him."

"Do you think we can?" asked Chippie.

"Why, of course we can," Billy Brighteyes assured him, and away they went on a hunt for their friend

Perky, the Long-Tailed Jumping Mouse.

Dear Kiddie Klub:
There are so many things to talk about.

Perhaps we had best begin on our favorite topic, the Saturday Kiddie Klub Korner. I am glad to hear that you like it so well. Your letters have been sweet. I want to thank you for them.

It is a great deal more fun for me to fashion a big Kiddie Klub Korner for you when I know you too enjoy it and that you are reading and clipping out the features you fancy most.

The April contest closes this week, Friday the 28th. If your essay or poem has not yet been sent, do not delay longer. Think what a pity it would be, for instance, to have it come one day late.

Of course no contest award can be given except to contestants who state their ages. And it is almost equally important to know the age of the author of every contribution sent to the Kiddie Klub Korner. So, when sending contributions of any description, please be careful to tell your age.

Age has a great deal to do with the worth of a poem, drawing or essay. A thing that would be a really clever piece of work for a ten-year-old member might be only fairly good if done by a boy or girl of say, fifteen, you know.

My best love to you, my cousins. Write me as soon as you find time and tell me something about yourselves. Then, if you like, I will tell all our other cousins about it through the Kiddie Klub Korner.

Your ever-interested
COUSIN ELEANOR.

SPRING:
The bluebird is building her nest
The beetles will fly about soon
Woodland creatures awake from their rest,
The butterfly's coming out of his cocoon.
By Ida Weber, Hempstead, L. I.

MISCHIEVOUS KITTY.
Kitty with her fur of floss

is playing with a ball of moss.
All at once she stops and sees
A robin singing in the trees.
Little Kitty licked her lips
And crouched behind a great big stick,
But soon Mr. Robin's eyes
Were watching Kitty with surprise
It flew into the air so free
And down into another tree.
By Margaret Weis, age fourteen,
Brooklyn.

ARE YOU LONELY?
There once was a very lonely boy,
Who was very, very sad,
And though he had many a toy,
He was an unhappy lad.
His mother tried the best she could
To take away his sadness
But try as she would she could not
Fill him with joy and gladness.
One day she said to him kindly
"Be good while I am out!"
And to her surprise when she returned
She saw him play and shout.
She asked him for an explanation.
"It's this way, mother, you see,
I joined the Evening World Kiddie Klub
And now I am filled with glee."
So if you are a lonely boy
And very melancholic
Just join the Evening World Kiddie Klub
And you will be full of frolic.
By George Violante, age twelve,
Long Island City.

HOW TO WIN A PENNANT.
Kiddies who would like to have a Kiddie Klub pennant must bring five new members into the Klub. Six coupons, numbered in rotation, must be saved for each new member, and mailed to me with a letter telling me the name, age and address of the new member, and the name, age, address and certificate number of the kiddie who wishes to win a pennant. A new member who brings four other new members into the Klub with him will also receive a pennant.
